Kutztown University Internships

Work-related experience is an essential part of your career development. Employers like to hire graduates who not only have the necessary educational background in their field of study, but also have experience applying that knowledge to real life situations.

By definition, an internship is a carefully monitored work or volunteer experience with intentional learning goals. It is temporary work that helps you:

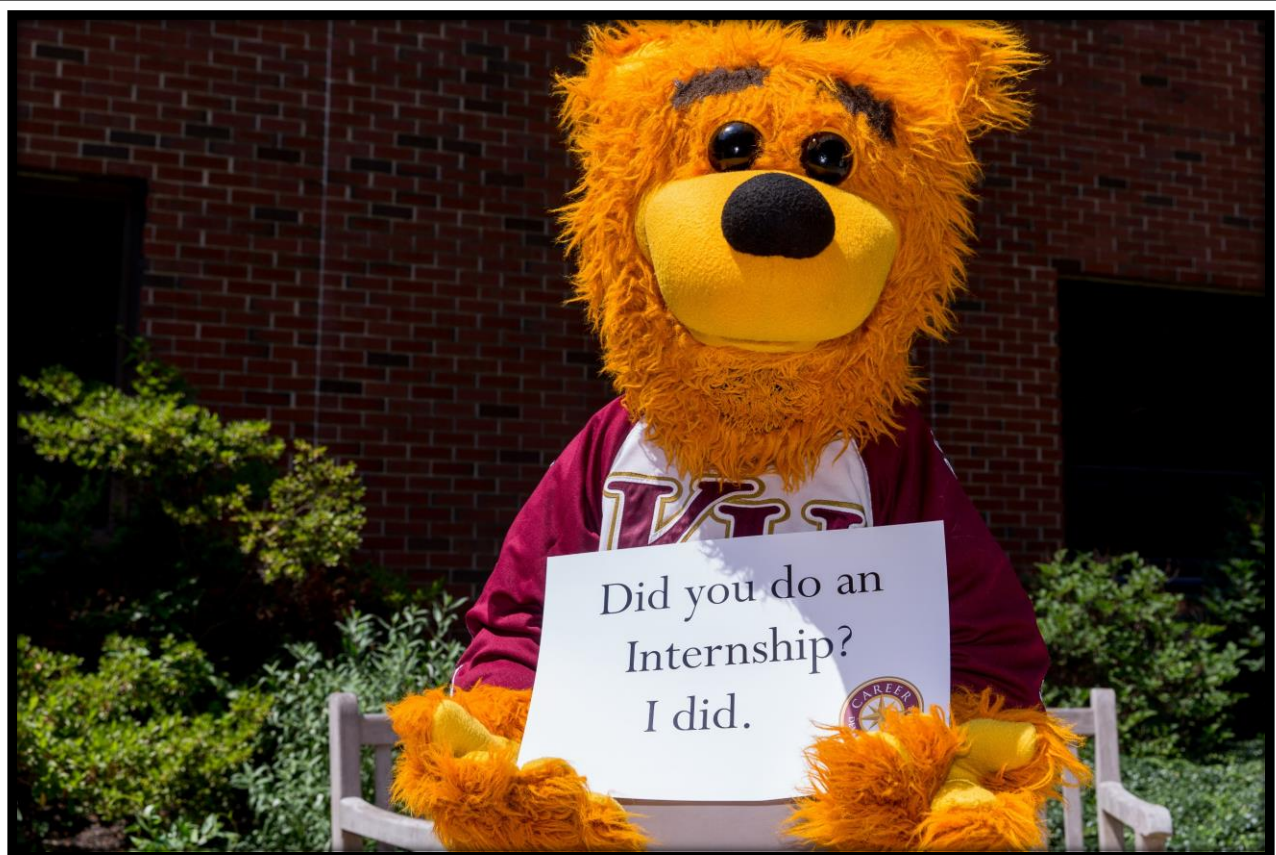

- Build self-confidence, knowledge and professionalism
- Expand your professional network
- Demonstrate your initiative and skills to prospective employers and graduate schools

At KU, internships may be taken for credit or not-for-credit. Each of these opportunities takes place in the work environment and provides valuable hands-on experience.

Reach out to your academic department if you wish to receive credit.

Visit: www.kutztown.edu/internships for departmental contacts.
