

Bachelor of Arts: Sociology
Minor: Sociology

Sociology is the study of society and social behavior and focuses on the interaction between population groups and institutions and their influences on each other. Students will develop a deeper understanding of diversity through courses in deviant behavior, environmental sociology, and social inequality. Additionally, a variety of courses in such areas as family, gender and LGBTQ studies, as well as immigration are offered.

A degree in Sociology is ideal for students who wish to pursue graduate studies and/or careers in business, government, non-profit organizations, behavioral health, health care management, social service and criminal justice agencies, and community development and action groups. Employers recommend one or more internships to be successful and competitive when entering this field.
