We thought that passing General Education at Kutztown was the hard part. But the details of implementing and assessing the new model have provided their own challenges, and opportunities.

We created the following artifacts in response to challenges implementing or assessing this new general education model:

- Curriculum Map
- Thematic course approval process, criteria, and application
- General Education marketing materials
- Rubrics
- Assessment training materials for faculty

Politics

Any major change to the curriculum during a time of financial crisis will be subject to political strife, as faculty worry how the new general education requirements will affect enrollment in their courses.
