Studying another language is an exciting and rewarding experience, not to mention a career path that leads to many opportunities in today's global marketplace. As a Modern Language major you will learn and use cross-cultural communication skills, develop a deeper appreciation for people from different cultures, experience the artistic, literary, socio-political and historical contributions of the culture, improve skills in your native language, and understand more fully your place and your native culture's place on a global scale. A Modern Language major is ideal for students who wish to pursue entrance into graduate programs and/or careers in a variety of settings including business, banking, social services, government and international organizations. Employers recommend one or more internships to be successful and competitive when entering this field.
